COREY BAKER

When Kiwi dancer and choreographer Corey Baker hung up his ballet tights and left New Zealand for the UK in 2007, he was determined to create contemporary dance projects that would appeal to a more varied and younger audience. Fast forward to today and the former professional ballet dancer is now famed for his award-winning performances. His mantra of creating productions not just for opera houses is drilled into his studio, Corey Baker Dance, and focuses on creating memorable experiences that are as suitable to be seen in streets and parks as at the Albert Hall. Baker's upcoming show is a celebration of that nostalgic British icon, the red telephone box. Premiering in May, Phone Box will be touring outdoor locations — nationally and internationally — free for all to enjoy.
